KC gets $7 million to fight homelessness

The Kansas City Star

The Kansas City area on the Missouri side of the state line will soon get more than $7 million from federal housing dollars to fight homelessness.

Mayor Kay Barnes was joined by Philip Mangano, executive director of the U.S. Interagency Council on Homelessness, in announcing the grant award, a 19 percent increase over last year and a record amount of money awarded for the region.

The money will fund 27 programs by agencies including the Kansas City Housing Authority, SAVE Inc., reStart Inc., Sheffield Place and Swope Health Services.

The latest count shows the Kansas City area had about 4,300 homeless citizens.
